Undergraduate Academic Affairs and the Phi Beta Kappa Society are honored to host Visiting Scholar, Rolena Adorno. Please join us for her public lecture "What Does Columbus Day Mean Now? or Why Hispanic Heritage Month Matters" on Thursday, October 27, 2016 from 4:30-6:00pm at the Rutgers Academic Building, Room 2225 on the College Avenue Campus.

Adorno is the Sterling Professor of Spanish at Yale University and her books explore the uneasy encounters between Spanish and Amerindian cultures, the debates about the rights of conquest and colonization, the emergence of literary voices, and the resonance of the Spanish colonial heritage in Latin American literature today.

Tickets are free to all and available at pbkrutgers.eventbrite.com
